Unity Physician Partners Expands Medical Home Concept to Southern Indiana

Emerging medical/behavioral health practice expands its footprint to Bloomington and Columbus, Indiana with two new clinic locations.

FRANKLIN, TN – Unity Physician Partners, Inc. has expanded into southern Indiana with two new clinic locations at 645 South Rogers Street in Bloomington and 720 North Marr Road in Columbus. Leading this new patient-centered medical home is Dr. Jason Fish, MD, who joins Unity Medical Clinic from First Health Care Group in Bloomington. Dr. Fish is a member of the American Academy of Family Practitioners and holds multiple certifications in advanced care methods.

The new clinic model aligns strategically with Unity's mission to not only fill the gap of those underserved medically, but also encompasses defined models of care for behavioral health, diabetes and other chronic conditions. This new model has gained growing and widespread acceptance from insurance carriers and new patients alike, as it has demonstrable results for improved outcomes and significantly reduced costs to patients and insurers.

"We are quite proud to align with Dr. Fish and expand into Indiana with our innovative model of care," says Michael Bailey, CEO and co-founder of Unity Physician Partners. "We will exceed the expectations of those needing greater access to high quality care in the region."

Dr. Fish completed his undergraduate studies at Northwestern University and earned his Doctor of Medicine at Tulane University. He served as Chief Resident for Family Practice at Columbus Regional Medical Center in Georgia, following a surgical residency at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas.

Unity's footprint has recently expanded from its three-clinic base in Nashville to Memphis, Clarksville, and Cookeville, TN, as well as Bloomington and Columbus, IN. As a joint partner with Centerstone Behavioral Health of Nashville, Unity offers services in conjunction with Centerstone's existing clinic footprint and beyond.
